

PREPARING PLANS FOR RECEPTION

LABORATORY PLANS ARE BEING MADE FOR WELCOMING OF PRESIDENT WILSON ON HIS ARRIVAL IN FRANCE.

INVITED TO COLOGNE

President Wilson Has Been Invited to Meet German Ministry in Cologne.

(BY ASSOCIATED PRESS.)

Paris, Dec. 8.—Elaborate plans are being made by the French government for the entertainment of President Wilson. These plans include a series of dinners and official calls, and a gala night at the opera. The program will be completed in the next few days.

To Murat Mansion.

Up to the present it has been decided that President Wilson will arrive at the Hotel de Beaulieu station at ten o'clock Saturday morning. He will be met by President Poincaré and other members of the French government. He will then go immediately to the Murat mansion which will be his home while in Paris. No definite decision has been reached as to whether the president will go to the Hotel de Beaulieu station at ten o'clock Sunday morning, but it is probable that he will drive to Paris. It is possible that other plans may be made for that time. Mr. Wilson's arrival in Paris will be an occasion of considerable ceremony.

As soon as possible after his arrival, Mr. Wilson will attend a conference with the French government. The conference will take place at the "Maison d'Or" in Paris.

School Children Out.

The school children of Paris will be out in force when the president arrives. Thursday is usually a school holiday in Paris as Saturday in the United States. King George of England and King Albert of Belgium arrived in Paris on Thursday so that the children did not have an extra holiday when the arrival of President Wilson was expected.

Invited to Cologne.

Amsterdam.—President Wilson is invited to visit Cologne by the Volks-Zeitung of that city, which suggests that representatives of the German government meet him there.

The independent republic of Schleswig-Holstein has been proclaimed, according to the Weser Zeitung of Bremen. The newspaper also states that a sanguinary encounter between the German and British forces occurred on December 5th. Finding a detachment of Red Guards and members of the soldiers' and sailors' councils, the British forces were ordered to march back to their barracks, and the British forces were ordered to march back to their barracks.

MUNICH VERY GAY SAYS CORRESPONDENT WHO VISITS CITY

(BY ASSOCIATED PRESS.)

Munich, Dec. 8.—Munich looks much less changed after four years of war than those who knew it would have thought possible. The city appears far livelier and gay than two and a half years ago when the correspondent visited it. Part of this improvement is unquestionably due to the profusion of the German flag everywhere, emphasized by the red banners of the socialists.

Although fairly dark in the evening because coal must be saved, the streets are crowded during the early hours. Restaurants are open and a fairly palatable ration of beer is served. It is in minor details that changes are most apparent at first glance. For instance, even many of the larger restaurants and prominent hotels have paper napkins and paper tablecloths as well.

Stamps Taste Bad.

Every postage stamp one finds has a strange, disagreeable taste because a shortage of something has led to the introduction of a sub for the time honored "Stekmark."

Many signs which formerly proudly displayed signs proclaiming they were purveyors to Bavarian royalty have faded the words, but the work generally has been done so well that the letters stand out so prominently that they are almost as effective as the old signs.

Food apparently is obtainable in restaurants, although expensive. The rationing seems to be fairly good on the part of the people. Food now is more plentiful than a month ago because the signing of the armistice brought out stocks of food which had been in reserve. The people are perhaps a little better off than they were, but the street crowds appear to be warmly dressed and give no sign of suffering.

Food Expensive.

The streets are as clean as ever and the stores are beautiful although filled with articles, the prices of which would have been unbelievable four years ago.

DISCIPLINE OF ARMY MOST EXCELLENT

(BY ASSOCIATED PRESS.)

Washington, Dec. 8.—Not a single member of the American army has been put to death since the beginning of the war because of the commission of a purely military offense, Major Gen. Crowder, judge advocate general declared in his annual report today to Secretary Baker. General Crowder said this fact is the outstanding feature of his report.

"Very few death sentences have been imposed," he said, "and none of them imposed for purely military offenses have been carried into execution."

Records of the judge advocate general's office show that 12,357 officers and men were brought before general court martial, of whom 10,373 or 83 per cent were convicted. More than half the charges against officers were listed under three heads:

1. Absence without leave, drunkenness, and conduct unbecoming an officer.

2. Convictions of enlisted men for desertion, the general said, were actually less than in the previous year, although the strength of the army had increased many fold.

The reports show that one enlisted man was convicted of desertion, one of being a spy, and three men were convicted of sleeping on post.

"Future Prosperity
Rests on Foreign Trade," Says Clark

(BY ASSOCIATED PRESS.)

Baltimore, Md., Dec. 8.—America's future prosperity rests in large measure on the increase of its foreign trade, declared Champ Clark, of the House of Representatives, today in an address here today at the opening of the annual convention of the Southern Commercial club.

"The one problem resulting from the war with which the Southern Commercial Congress is concerned," he said, "is the problem of increasing the freedom of the seas."

Clark, who is a member of the Senate, said that the freedom of the seas is the most powerful nation on earth. Last year and this, we fought the war for the freedom of the seas, he said, and that is the chief reason why we participated in the war.

BRITISH DAY PROVES LOYALTY TO ALLIES

APPROPRIATE ADDRESSES AT THE CELEBRATION SAT. MORNING EVENING.

A MEMORABLE EVENT

Loyal Sons and Daughters of England and Ireland and Scotland Hold Banquet.

The Union Jack hung solemnly alongside the Stars and Stripes, and the strains of "God Save the Queen" blended harmoniously into a melody of loyalty and devotion. The celebration of British Day at the Myers Hotel on Saturday evening.

Roast beef and English plum pudding, revived memories of "Bonny England" while the music, Scotch stories and splendid addresses recalled the deeds of the brave people, of the "Tight Little Isles," thrilled the hearts and stirred the emotions of the listeners.

The toast master of the occasion, Mr. M. O. Moutat called attention to the fact that those present, were not here to celebrate the war, but as full American citizens, doing honor to a brave ally.

He wished also to emphasize the fact, that America approached this victory in a spirit of gladness, and this idea in mind he introduced Miss Evelyn Welch, who read with deep appreciation, "The Reconciliation" by Rudyard Kipling.

Tells Stirring Story
Along the same line of thought, showing at what terrible cost the victory had been won, was the admirable talk given by Mr. Carl E. Biebingger who had been working close behind the lines during the last years of the war. He was sent across in May, 1917, to the front in Belgium, where he saw other agricultural machinery for the Allies, and he assisted them in their work of rehabilitating country devastated by war.

Hum Cunniff
The cunning of the Germans in having the invaded territory all listed, every man's name recorded, and the number he could billet in his home noted even before war was started was mentioned.

Mr. Biebingger was in Paris during the bombardment of the city, with the big guns, and saw the second shell fired, which he described as being about seven feet long. Among the most wonderful experiences was viewing the Black Rock and the American troops when they first swung down the streets of Paris, on their entrance into the war.

Adam's Talk
An informal talk, given by Hon. E. W. Adams, the noted and a career, who was some of the things for which America was indebted to Great Britain. "The English Navy," he pointed out, had been guarding the seas, had carried and transported and had served in innumerable ways, to save guard the paths of the ocean.

Hon. John M. Whitehead
"The English law," he pointed out, was the foundation for all the legal systems of the world, and indeed of the world. "Our language," he said, was the English language, and it was enforced universally in all schools in the U. S. and in newspapers, wherever published in this country.

He praised the literature of the English, from the time of Shakespeare down through Milton, Dickens and others to the present time.

League of Nations
He touched on the idea of "League of Nations," which should be strong enough to enforce a just peace, and which could enforce the claims of the weaker nations.

Old Songs
Some familiar old English songs were rendered by Mr. G. Ridley, many of the audience joining in the choruses. They were "Hail to the Motherland" and "Boys of the Old Brigade."

Mr. Ed. Vineer played a beautiful melody by August Van Bion, and W. McFarland played all accompaniments very effectively and ably.

CLASS BASKETBALL GAMES START SOON

First steps in organizing the Janesville high school basketball team were made this morning when it was announced that the inter class basketball games will be started in the near future.

In past years with the exception of last year it has been the custom to have the games after the close of the school year. Last year, however, it was found wise to stage the games at the first of the season in order to bring out material which otherwise would have been lost.

All the classes will be represented by teams. The first game will be between the Freshmen and the Sophomores and the second game between the Juniors and Seniors. The winners of these two games will play for the championship after which they will take on the faculty team. In previous years the games have been of great interest and this year will probably be no exception. Practice will begin either today or tomorrow, after which the games will be held.

It is probable that the first game may be played Friday, otherwise it will be Monday.

The Greatest Picture That Has Been Shown in Janesville, That Wonderful Screen Actress

THEDABARA

"THE SIREN OF THE NILE"

This super-picture will distance anything you have ever seen for splendor—massiveness—and accuracy in production, to say nothing of the wonderful art of THEDA BARA.

Nothing like it has been shown in this city. The magnificence of the special scenery will hold you entranced. The tender scenes between Anthony and Cleopatra are marvels of emotional acting.

We want you to see this superb production. It costs over a million dollars to produce and we think it will continue to let the Apollo live up to its reputation of showing only the best feature pictures.

PRICES: Matinees, all seats 28c. Evenings: Main floor and first two rows of balcony, 55c. Balance balcony, 28c. Box seats, $1.10. Patrons, especially those who live out of town, are urged to phone for their reservations now.

SPECIAL NOTE: Owing to the size of this production there will be only one performance each evening, starting at 8:20.

THE APPROACH OF CHRISTMAS
There's a little chap at our house that is being mighty good— Keeps the front lawn looking tidy in the way we've said he should: Doesn't leave his little wagon, when he's dashed with his play. On the sidewalk as he used to (now he puts it right away). When we call him into supper, we don't have to stand and shout. It is getting on to Christmas and it's plain he's found it out. He eats the food we give him without murmur or complaint. He sits up at the table like a cherub or a saint. He doesn't pinch his sister just to hear how loud she'll squeal. Doesn't ask us to excuse him in the middle of the meal. And at eight o'clock he's willing to be tucked away in bed. It is getting close to Christmas: Nothing further need be said. I chuckle every evening as I see that little elf. With the crooked part proclaiming that he brushed his hair himself. And I chuckle as I notice that his hands and face are clean. For in him a perfect copy of another boy is seen. A little boy at Christmas, who was also being good. Never guessing that his father and his mother understood. There's a little boy at our house that is being mighty good. Doing everything that's proper, doing everything he should. But beside him there's a grown-up who has learned life's better truth. Who is proudly living over all the joys of vanished youth. And although he little knows it (for it's what I never knew). There's a mighty happy father sitting at the table too.

News Notes from Movieland

BY DAISY DEAN

Frank Keenan is the very latest actor to venture forth as an independent producer. For some time past rumors have been whispered about that this eminent actor of stage and screen was planning to make and present his own pictures and now an official announcement comes as a final confirmation.

"My reason for entering the picture field in this manner is that I may be able to make productions without distraction from any personal manager or syndicate," Mr. Keenan said. "I intend to take my time in making productions, and not rush a picture through in two weeks when it demands three times that space. No films will be made of a sordid or sensational character, and propaganda pictures are strictly barred."

The new company will be known as the Frank Keenan Productions, Inc. The pictures will be released through the Pathe exchanges.

Keenan will work in the Brunton studios in New York. His first picture is "Wild Cat," from the novel by Albert Payson Terhune. Jack Cunningham will make the scenario, and Ernest Ward, who has been associated with the actor as director, will be retained in that capacity.

"NOTHER ROMANCE"
Cupid is doing pretty good business in the scene circles lately. First it was Charlie Chaplin and Mildred Harris who came forth with the orange blossom secret, then Henry Walthall and Mary Charleson, and now it's June Elvidge.

June managed her wedding and courtship just as they do in the movies. She only knew the man four weeks. But she's happy. She says so herself.

The wedding took place last Tuesday at the Hotel Plaza, New York, in the late afternoon. The bridegroom was Lieut. Frank Badgely, member of the Canadian commission. He was one of the 28,000 in the first Canadian expeditionary forces. In December, 1916, he was shot, shocked and gassed and now wears the military cross won at the battle of Courcellette.

June Elvidge Badgely is well known to movie fans. She was one of the popular stars for World Film. What her housekeeping plans are we have not heard.

MARY SETTLES AT LAST
Mary Pickford has at last decided that she will let the First National distribute her pictures. She signed her contract on the very day that the armistice was signed. She will make three pictures at $250,000 each.

To Honor Men.

Green Bay.—Green Bay has taken its first step in honor of the men who enlisted in Uncle Sam's army in the fight to make the world safe for democracy.

This avenue of trees, from this point north to the city limits is dedicated by the City Beautiful committee of the Green Bay Women's club and properly owners in honor of the soldiers and sailors of Green Bay who served in the American army and navy during the world's great war.

The above text is inscribed on a dedicatory marker which has just been placed at Mission street, the half way point between Green Bay and DePere by the City Beautiful committee.

The Green Bay committee is the first committee in the state to dedicate such an avenue to its soldiers and sailors who have served in the recent world war. It also has the distinction of being the first society to plant an avenue of trees.

HEART AND HOME PROBLEMS

LETTERS MAY BE ADDRESSED TO MRS. THOMPSON, IN CARE OF THE GAZETTE

Dear Mrs. Thompson: Will you please suggest something nice to give a boy friend for Christmas? I want to give about eight or ten dollars for it. I should not have said "a friend," for he is more to me than just a friend. I love him dearly and he has told me several times that he loves me. To know that he is a civilian will perhaps add you in your suggestions.

I have to have a man's habits and what he already possesses in order to make a good selection in a present for him. A fountain pen, smoking or writing outfit, bill folder, picture or box of cigars might be acceptable.

Dear Mrs. Thompson: I have been going with a boy for over a year. In all that time I have never heard of him going to the store to buy anything. I think a great deal of him and I think he does me. I have another boy who I love very much. He is a very nice boy and I like him very much. They both are fine boys. If the other one comes home from France what shall I do with both? I love the one I have gone with for a year and a half.

AMERICAN BEAUTY. Go with both of the boys. Since you are not engaged, neither has an entire claim upon you.

Dear Mrs. Thompson: I have been married a little over a year and have a little baby. I love my husband dearly and until a week ago I thought I loved his sister, who lives in another town, was very sick and I had to go to take care of her. She got well sooner than we expected and I thought I would surprise my husband by going home without telling him I was coming.

Before I went away we made plans for him to cook his own dinners at night and when I got home I found a lot of dirty dishes in the sink. I made him think he had been doing as we arranged. I went to the store and bought things for a very fine dinner that night. It was ready at the usual time and my husband did not return home at six o'clock and so I gave up expecting him. Then I waited until twelve and finally went to bed because he did not show up.

At three in the morning he came in and he had been drinking. I made him confess that he had been and he told me that he had gone to a poker party at a friend's house. I don't know what to do. It worries me all the time now to think that my husband is not true to me. I know when I was away. To my knowledge he has never done a thing like this when I was home. Do you think he will ever be better? I can never trust him entirely again.

Your husband's offense is a serious one in comparison with the surprises some husbands give their wives. He does love you if he is faithful to you when you are at home. Probably he was lonely without you and accepted the invitation to play poker more for a diversion than because he likes the game. Do not make a big matter out of this. Continue to trust your husband and entirely forget this little occurrence.

Dear Mrs. Thompson: I am a girl twenty years old. I have been going with a man three years my senior. He was sixteen. He gives me every attention when he is at home and sends me candy and flowers when away, but he has never told me that he loves me. I go with other boys sometimes, but he never seems jealous. He is a very nice boy and I like him very much. Next time and never says a word about my going with someone else. I love him, but it seems he will never love me.

He is in France and called me that he arrived safely. He does that way all the time. I thought that he would tell me he loved me, but he did not. Do you think I should love him and tell him sometimes?

Everybody thinks that we are engaged or secretly married. I blush when people say so. He is so attentive and goes with me to other girls. I can see why people think what they do. What shall I do?

Just be patient and wait. Both of you are very young to marry, and the man probably realizes this. If the money he spends so lavishly comes from his father's pocket, he is not a man to marry. He may be waiting until he is in a position to support a wife before he asks you to marry him.

Edith was sewing a patch on the knee of small Jack's stocking and figuring at the same time how to pare down expenses somewhere so as to buy a new rug for the living room. She had to get the morning paper at an absurd angle now to cover up the hole in the present floor covering—those cheap grass mats do wear out so once they start. Since she had used rice to replace potatoes, rice had risen in cost. Perhaps beans were cheaper; she must try and see if John would eat dried lima beans.

After bacon was sold out, she was saving a little by buying butterine, anyhow, and John hadn't kicked much. Next time she bought shoes for the children she was going to try that composition stuff that they're using now instead of goat leather. Perhaps, with the rigid cutting out of eggs and cream for a few weeks and using the macaroni and cheese, she could manage the new rug.

Into her reverie of economics broke the light voice of Fay Summers. "I've come to invite you to my engagement luncheon," breezed the girl as she spread her chiffon skirts daintily in the nearest chair.

Edith drew a long breath as she glanced at the girl who had been her problem, and glanced up at the externally lovely young spendthrift before her. Edith never looked upon Fay Summers without experiencing a vague feeling of resentment. Fay was the sort of girl who seemed created for the specific purpose of setting at naught all the moral axioms in the world.

Fay never did to other as she liked others to do to her. Yet "others" were always doing for Fay. She was not unkind—far from it—she was always inheriting the earth. She considered it less blessed to give than to receive. She judged harshly, yet was no more harshly judged than the average person.

Viciously and unprovokedly while Fay got all sorts of undeserved happiness. She was one of those who, having much, were always receiving added benefits, while others who had little, lost even that.

Much of this having passed through Edith Perrot's mind in a flash, she replied to Fay's announcement of the engagement luncheon by a monosyllabic "Yes? When?"

"Well, I think the puppies will be old enough by a week from Saturday," was Fay's puzzling rejoinder.

"Puppies?"

"Yes, I'm going to have twelve brindle bull puppies for the son-in-laws. Isn't it a cut idea? I've ordered them from the Cosmo Kennel."

Edith's eyes widened in amazement. She put down her mending and gazed searchingly at the girl her brother was going to marry.

"You don't mean," she began in protest, but Fay cut in.

"Oh, now, don't begin to preach economy. You know I detest that! The dogs will cost twenty-five apiece and they're cheap as dirt at that. But they're all arranged for. What's bothering me is where we can get some good terrapin. I've seen heart on having terrapin. I may have to send south for it. And do you happen to know where I can get the runner occupant had been engaged to marry?"

Edith bit back the sharp answer she longed to make. She knew Fay was detouring her plans largely in a spirit of mischief. It amused her to clash with Edith on questions of proper spending.

No, I don't know where your supplies can be bought, Fay, she answered quietly. "But I should think that even if you don't mind laying this extraordinary expense upon your aunt, Mrs. Blake, and setting a standard that the man you marry will find it hard if not impossible to live up to, you would hate to spend hundreds of dollars in such a way when the whole world is plunged in the suffering of war and people are actually dying for lack of food and care. I honestly don't see how you can do it, Fay."

"There you go—knew it!" smiled Fay mockingly. "How can I help it if the world's all topsy-turvy? It's the duty of some of us to put a little gaiety into it. I'm for being happy. I am!"

Oooo—hoo! she shouted in greeting as Edith came up the path. But there was no response. Ned's face was dark with trouble.

TESTED RECIPES.

Hann in Casserole. Place in casserole a slice of ham, cut thick, and pour over it two tablespoons of vinegar, and one tablespoon of syrup, slice two or three cloves in the meat, add half a cup of hot water, cover, and bake slowly for forty-five minutes. If one chance to have syrup from pickles peaches or pears left from some other year's canning, (for of course we haven't made those things the last year), it may be used instead of the vinegar, syrup, and cloves, and is, in fact, much better. The quantity of liquid used in this recipe is for a small slice of ham, just enough for a helping for three persons.

Stuffed Potatoes. Bake large, smooth potatoes until soft in a half and scrape out inside, leaving the shell intact, mash the portion removed and season with salt, pepper and butter, add enough hot milk to moisten well, beat until light, replace in shells, and put back in oven a few minutes to brown slightly.

Spaghetti. Boil one pint of spaghetti until done, cook half pound hamburger an spoonful of fat until brown, adding to it an onion chopped fine. Place the cooked spaghetti in baking dish, together with a half can of tomatoes, cooked hamburger and onion, salt and pepper, and cook slowly three-quarters of an hour or longer.

Baked Bean Soup. Three cups cold baked beans, three pints water, two slices onion, one and one-half cups stewed and strained tomatoes or strained tomato pulp, two tablespoons butter substitute, or drippings, two tablespoons flour, salt and pepper. Put beans, water and onion in saucepan; bring to boiling point and simmer three minutes. Rub through sieve, add tomato, season to taste with salt and pepper, and mix with the butter or drippings and flour cooked together. Serve with crisp crackers.

GOOD CRULLER RECIPES.

Boughten.—One pint milk, two tablespoons sugar, three eggs, four tablespoons cooking oil, one compressed yeast cake, one-half teaspoon salt. Scald the milk, and when lukewarm add the oil, sugar, salt and yeast, moistened in a little cold water. Add the eggs well beaten, and sufficient flour to make a soft dough. Knead lightly, stand in a warm place until it has doubled its bulk, about two hours. When light, roll the dough in a thin sheet and cut either into round doughnuts with a hole in the center, or they may be rolled and braided. Place these on a clean cloth spread over the kitchen table. Cover and let them stand a half hour. Have ready a deep kettle of hot oil; put the doughnuts into the hot oil; with the up side down. Then brown on this side, turn and brown on the other. Lift with the skimmer, drain and dust with powdered sugar. Serve with coffee for breakfast.

Crullers.—Four tablespoons cooking oil; two eggs, four tablespoons sugar, one-half cup sour milk or cream, one-quarter nutmeg grated, one teaspoon salt, sufficient flour to make a dough. Put the sugar, oil and cream into a bowl; add the eggs thoroughly beaten and sufficient flour to make a soft dough. Roll the dough out on a sheet of an inch thick, cut into small rounds and then with a smaller cutter make a hole in the center. Drop the crullers in deep hot oil. When brown on one side, turn and brown on the other. Dust with powdered sugar.

SUGAR IS SWEET.

(Great Inventions Series)
Best patent attorney's office. There had been no smart inventors near slick inventions in for the last two minutes, and Silas Skidder, the attorney himself, was taking a nap and having a nice dream in the middle of it when

"Is this Silas Skidder, the largest patent attorney," pitched a high, masculine voice.

"XXX! I darn it!" the attorney replied, in thought.

"I have here," said the young man, for such he was, as he opened a small velvet handbag, "a wonderful invention. It is a sugar compass. You hold it in your hand like this, with the large hand of it pointing from you, because you are not sweet, and you walk along the street and point it toward each store you come to. If there is any sugar in the store, a green light will appear and the large hand will point to the store, swing to the right, left, and back again, signifying that sugar is there, while the little hand points to a number telling how many pounds are in the bin. This little pin on the dial tells if there is a cop around by jumping up and down if there is and if there isn't you just sneak in and steal the sugar and—"

But here the young inventor found himself in the hands of the Asylum guard from whom he had escaped.

DO YOU LIKE CROWDS?

"Let's not go," said the Author's wife. "There will be a tremendous crowd."

We had been speaking of the advisability of going into the city, to be present at a celebration the identity of which you may suspect.

"That's why I want to go," said Molly, the little stenographer-lady. "I love crowds."

"An, with heart and voice I said, 'Me, too!'"

Ever since I was a child I have been held back from this or that by people who said, "Let's not go, there will be an awful crowd." Nevertheless (or is it consequently?) ever since childhood I have loved crowds.

Jolly, Goodnatured Crowds.
Not awful, suffocating masses that get wedged in somewhere and can't move either way (though I don't mind these as much as most people do—if you hold on to yourself and don't let yourself get panicky and nervous, and just smile at your neighbor and make a joke of the thing, it's all right), but good-sized, jolly, excitable, irresponsible crowds—election-day crowds, football-games crowds, parade—seeing crowds.

It has long been my theory that some great artist should paint the gigantic crowd at some big football game, say, for instance, the Harvard and Yale. I cannot imagine anything more typically American than that crowd—its bigness, its rollicking youthfulness, its intense interest in the sport, the unreckoning expenditure of time and money, that the gathering represents.

The First Trade Union.
I love the description in Acts of what the early Christians did in the way of a crowd. Do you remember it? Paul had gone to Ephesus, preaching the Christian gospel, and saying that, "There be no gods which are made with hands." Whereupon a silversmith who made shrines for Diana, "called together all the workmen of like occupation" (the ancient is the new, how modern the old—here, almost 2,000 years ago, we have a trade union) and warned them of the danger of their own greed. They at once, seeing their livelihood threatened, became vastly excited, the contagion spread to the rest of the town, and everyone crowded into the theatre. Then comes the description of the mob:

ASK FOR and GET

"Some therefore cried one thing and some another; for the assembly was confused; and the more part knew not wherefore they were come together."

Two Hours Cheering.
And later on we are told a fact which puts to shame our nominating conventions and their cheerings for one candidate or another:

"All with one voice about the space of two hours cried out, Great is Diana of the Ephesians."

I think it is Emerson who says, "A crowd thinks by infection; they believe what they see. They stop reasoning, stop thinking things out sanely, and just feel for a while. Which, of course is most dangerous if the wrong sort of person gets hold of them (like friend Demetrius) and makes them feel the wrong thing. But it certainly is exciting and exhilarating."

SPOTS BEFORE THE EYES.

A novice gazing into a microscope for the first time sees all sorts of spots or things that are to all intents not noticed by the experienced user of the instrument. With experience one learns to disregard these spots or defects and in time they are scarcely noticed, though undoubtedly present.

Similar spots or misceae volutantes, as eye doctors call them, after our w. k. fashion of applying a trifling name to a trifling condition, are no doubt constantly floating before our eyes, and we can even see them if we drive to see them without striving to do so, and are considerably worried about them.

Persons whose eyes are sensitive or over-fatigued are more likely to focus their attention on these floating specks and chameleons are always ready to help the work along to the extent of the victims' willingness to be buncoed. The average human being is a willing one.

These spots are of no significance, for perfectly healthy individuals with normal eyes often see them. The distinguishing characteristic of these floating specks is that they float across the vision irregularly or perhaps quite regularly if one watches intently for them.

There are other spots sometimes noted by persons with real eye trouble, and these spots remain stationary when the individual regards a fixed object. Slight opacities in the cornea or clear covering of the sight, coming from injuries or inflammation, may cause fixed specks in the field of vision.

There is a normal blind spot in the field of vision. This is the place where the optic nerve enters the eye and fans out over the retina. If you close the left eye and fix the right eye on a large dot made some three inches at the left of another dot on the paper, then bring the paper slowly toward the face while you still steadily regard the left dot, the right one will disappear at a certain point, which is precisely when the light from it falls on the blind spot of the retina.

Besides corneal opacities, beginning cataract in advanced life may cause these specks or scotomata; patients often complain of seeing light spots where there is really but one light. Near-sighted people are often annoyed by these scotomata. Any one, even in perfect health, may see things on suddenly rising, turning a somersault for the first time in years.

"No," said Lucille, with conviction. "It's my mother. She has seen the fire from Huntington's and wants to know if I am safe. We must answer it and tell her that everything is all right."

"No one could go in there," I protested. "The fire is raging in the living room, and the walls may fall any moment."

"But mother will worry."

"What if she does?" A man under stress of excitement is sometimes unintentionally brutal.

"If you men are not brave enough," Lucille declared, with eyes flashing, "if you're so afraid of getting singed, I'm going in to answer that telephone myself and tell my mother that I am safe."

"You wouldn't be safe if you were talking over that telephone," I was exasperated, but it was impossible to allow a girl in a flimsy negligee to go into that furnace. "Since you put it that way, I'll go."

I groped my way to the instrument, jammed the receiver to my ear and shouted, "Hello!"

"Sorry to wake you, old chap," said a male voice apologetically, "but I simply must speak to Miss Dummore."

"You go to Hellfax!" I requested loudly, and dropping the receiver, made a wild dash for the door, from which I emerged with my clothing on fire in only one or two spots.

"Thank you!" Lucille was very sweet in bestowing her gratitude. "Was she very much worried?"

"It wasn't your mother," I said shortly. "It was Mr. Blaney."

"Ned?" asked Vida; then, without waiting for an answer, "I must speak to him."

I gently restrained her. "Blaney?" queried Lucille blankly; then, turning to me, "Your brother?"

"No relation," I returned.

"He's my father," Vida explained. "Just the dearest old Blaney that ever lived. He's waiting for me at Fair View. We were to have been married today, or yesterday, rather."

"Oh!" Lucille retired to her inner consciousness to think.

I told Vida that Blaney knew she was safe, as he had called up several times during the day.

"Where was he?"

"You were always out somewhere with Mr. Blair," I explained.

"You didn't tell Ned that, did you?"

"Why, yes, I guess I did. Why?"

"He's so jealous," sighed Vida. "It makes him furious when I talk to other men. Of course after we're married I'll train him differently, but now I have to be careful."

My attention was distracted from the burning building by the arrival of Bill Johnson, who walked unannounced into the circle of light. The noise of the Merry Widow arriving had apparently been lost in the crackling of the flames.

PETHEY DINK—PETHEY FORGOT THAT FALL ALWAYS FOLLOWS SPRING.

"Well," I inquired, "were Mrs. Green and Mr. Blair all right?"

"I shall not know it," Bill replied phlegmatically. "I can't, by Ylimminy, and 'eh'."

"Can't find them? Nonsense! Did you go up to the house?"

"Yes, sure. And I look in all the rooms. No one shall be in each."

"They can't have left. Mrs. Green said she wouldn't."

"What's up now?" Bopp inquired.

"Mrs. Green has disappeared once more."

"Eloped with Tipton S. Blair?"

"Impossible! You haven't seen him since he left here."

"What else could have happened?"

"I can't imagine. It's a small island, and there would be no sense in supposing that she was hiding anywhere outside of the house. Besides, they both knew that the boat was coming back soon to get them."

"Mrs. Green is so elusive," Bopp criticized, "that I should think that when once you located her you would have kept your eye on her."

"If I had," I reminded him, "you would probably all be burnt to cinders now. There must be some plausible reason for Mrs. Green's disappearance. Suppose we don't tell her daughter right away until we try to find out what has happened. It would only cause her additional worry."

That was agreed upon.

"At any rate," Bopp said, "we can all go over to the mainland in the Merry Widow and get breakfast."

"No," declared Bill, shaking his head. "Merry Widow she shall not. She broke her valve spring. Maybe it takes all day to fix it up."

"Then for heaven's sake get at it!" Bopp growled crossly.

"I'll fix him up with some wire maybe," Bill cheerfully promised as he departed.

Lucille and Vida rejoined us presently.

"I have some breakfast for you," I announced.

"Soup?" Bopp uttered the word sarcastically.

"Oh, Tootles!" murmured Lucille. "I forgot," I said. "Tootles is found. I found Tootles last night."

"Where is my little sweetheart now?"

"In the summer house," I replied.

"Oh, my Tooties girl," she exclaimed, "looked up in that cold barn of a place all night!"

"I was there," I reminded her. "I stood it all right."

Lucille started out as fast as she could for the summer house.

"Wait a minute," I protested, wishing to explain about the reporter.

"Wait," she flashed at me, "when Tootles wants me? Never!"

Lucille broke into a run when she saw that I was following her and reached the door of the summer house first. When I arrived I heard a scream.

CHAPTER XVII.

THE man departed and after an hour the reporter, his face twisted up into an agonized expression, while Tootles stood over him, feebly licking his face, her little red tongue hardly able to wag.

"Oh," Lucille screamed jumping up and down in her excitement, "he's killing Tootles!"

"I'm afraid I laughed. Anyway, she cast a look of reproach at me and made a dive for the fired little pup. Tootles went through the door and dashed, barking, up the beach. Lucille followed after."

They were too fast for me. The last I saw of them was a tiny bobbing speck—that was Tootles—and a larger graceful figure with hair blowing free and kimono flying back, which was Lucille.

"What's all the excitement?" the reporter demanded. "Who's the pup?"

"We had a fire," I returned wearily.

"Mr. Green's house burned down."

"Everybody asleep, I suppose." The reporter sketched in the story from imagination. "You, the faithful watchman, see the flames, dash into the burning building and rescue the owner's beautiful daughter. It's a peach of a story. It's too bad you can't marry her," he added, eyeing me ruefully.

"You've got a wife and seven kids, I suppose."

"I have not," I retorted.

"Then you can marry her."

"Thanks."

"I mean you're not so terribly old and you might look all right if you washed your face and had some decent clothes."

For the first time I realized that I must be a pretty sad looking object. My clothes were wet, worn, singed and thoroughly muddled from having been slept in and ruined on.

I looked at him sharply. "What size collar do you wear?"

"Fourteen and a half," he replied glibly.

I glanced at him and removed the collar and necktie as carefully as possible. It was a fifteen and a half.

"Because you lied I shall confiscate the necktie also."

"No," he shouted, interpreting my glance. "You couldn't wear another thing of mine."

"I'm afraid we coincide only in the neck," I sighed regretfully.

"Look here," he began belligerently. "Don't you think this farce has gone far enough? I demand to be released. If you let me go now I'll promise not to have you put in jail, and if you'll get me a picture of Miss Green I'll give you $5."

"No," I decided absently.

"What will you do with me?"

"I don't know. It has been puzzling me. You know more about crime than I do. What do you suggest? I mean, under the height of his collar with my eye. "I can't say that I care much for your selection of collar style."

"If you aren't going to let me go," continued the young man, whose mind seemed to dwell constantly on himself, "when is breakfast?"

"There, you have ruined an otherwise perfect day. No one knows when, where or what breakfast is."

"No breakfast?" he questioned.

"None; nary breakfast."

He sighed. "There's a cigar in my—" He started to tell me which pocket when he recollected my propensity for confiscating his property.

"It's all right," I assured him. "I'm not smoking at present."

"In my left hand upper vest pocket," he finished.

I found a flat leather case in the pocket he had indicated. I opened the case, and a handful of crumpled tobacco fell out.

"I'm afraid I sat on it," I said apologetically.

He turned his face to the wall without a word. I left him alone with the dust of his last cigar.

When I had gone a short distance I heard him sneeze.

When I was satisfied that I had done the best I could to rearrange my disordered clothes and linen I rejoined the disconsolate group at the site of the one time house. There were only four of them—Captain Perkins, Jim, Vida and Kent. Lucille had not returned.

"Where's Lucille?" Vida inquired.

"Tootles got away," I explained, "and she chased her."

Dinner Stories

For three successive nights Newport walked the floor with the baby. On the fourth night he became desperate and bought a bottle of soothing syrup.

"Why, James," exclaimed his wife, when she saw the bottle, "what did you buy that for? Don't you know it is very dangerous to give a child anything like that?"

"Don't worry," was her husband's reply. "I'm going to take it myself."

"No, Herbert," she said, in a low tone, "it is impossible. I fear to trust my future with you."

"And why?"

"I have watched your conduct very closely. It lacks the mark of such devotion as my soul craves."

"Do I not come to see you four nights in the week?"

"Yes, but I have detected a calculating selfishness in your nature which I fear."

"What do you mean?"

"You have never yet failed to leave in time to catch the last bus."

"But that is only common sense."

"I know it is, Herbert and therefore it is not love."

"We'd have gotten on all right if that snake hadn't come along," and taken charge of the apple crop," said Eve.

"Yes," replied Adam. "This is the original case of the ultimate consumer getting the worst of it at the hands of the middleman."

"I wouldn't say McFavish can't learn the game," remarked Sandy, as they trudged home from the links; "but it will be difficult for him."

"Aye," agreed Donald. "At times he will be like to burst, what with being so religious and tongue-tied."

Fiery Eczema and Skin Eruptions

Readily Yield to This Old Remedy

Successfully used for 50 years.

Eczema and similar skin troubles come from a disordered, impure condition of the blood, and they can only be cured by giving the blood a thorough cleansing, and removing from it all traces of impurity.

This is why S. S. S. has been used so successfully in hundreds of cases of Eczema and other skin eruptions. This wonderful remedy is without an equal as a blood purifier, being probably the oldest blood medicine on the market. It has been sold by druggists for fifty years. Get a bottle today and begin treatment that will get results.

You are invited to write to-day for complete and full advice as to the treatment of your own case. Address, Chief Medical Adviser, Swift Specific Co., Dept. H, Atlanta, Georgia.

KEEP LOOKING YOUNG

It's Easy—If You Know Dr. Edwards' Olive Tablets

The secret of keeping young is to feel young—to do this you must watch your liver and bowels—there's no need of having a sallow complexion—dark rings under your eyes—pimples—a bilious look in your face—dull eyes with no sparkle. Your doctor will tell you ninety per cent of all sickness comes from inactive bowels and liver.

Dr. Edwards, a well-known physician in Ohio, perfected a vegetable compound mixed with olive oil to act on the liver and bowels, which he gave to his patients for years.

Dr. Edwards' Olive Tablets, the substitute for calomel, are gentle in their action yet always effective. They bring about that exuberance of spirit, that natural buoyancy which should be enjoyed by everyone, by toning up the liver and clearing the system of impurities.

You will know Dr. Edwards' Olive Tablets by their olive color. 10c and 25c per box. All druggists.

Spent Money Foolishly

"I have been a great sufferer from stomach trouble and gall stones. No one knows the pains I have suffered. Since taking the first dose of May's Wonderful Remedy am feeling fine, can work all day and eat anything I want. Have no more distress or palpitation of the heart from gas on my stomach. I have spent a great deal of money on doctors and medicine but not time to tell me." It is a simple, harmless preparation that removes the catarrhal mucus from the intestinal tract and allays the inflammation which causes practically all stomach, liver and intestinal ailments, including appendicitis. One dose will convince or money refunded. J. P. Baker, Druggist.

Resinol

counteracts the bad effect of sun, wind and dust upon your complexion

The smoke and dust of city life, and the sun and wind of the country, spell ruin for good complexions. But Resinol Ointment, aided by Resinol Soap repairs the damage done in this way and helps to keep the skin clear, clean and fresh.

Resinol Ointment is cooling, soothing and healing to an irritated skin. It contains medicinal agents that are in no way harsh or harmful and may be used without hesitation.

All druggists sell Resinol Soap and Ointment. Why don't you try them?
